Chairman Rogers, Ranking Member Dicks, Chairman Rehberg and Ranking Member DeLauro:

The Administration's budget request for Fiscal Year 2012 proposes to reduce funding for the Low-Income Home Energy Assistance Program (LIHEAP) by roughly $2.5 billion, to a total of $2.57 billion. LIHEAP provides vital assistance to low income families to ensure that they can stay healthy and secure during cold winters in the North and hot summers in the South and the Southwest. Cutting funding for LIHEAP by nearly half would mean that millions of families across the country would no longer be able to receive this vital aid. We are therefore writing to request that the Labor, Health and Human Services, Education and Related Agencies Appropriations bill for FY2012 provide at least the current funding level of $5.1 billion for LIHEAP.

As a result of the economic downturn and continued high and rising energy prices, record numbers of families are turning to LIHEAP for assistance for the third year in a row. According to the National Energy Assistance Director's Association, roughly 8.9 million families nationwide are expected to receive LIHEAP heating assistance this winter, an increase of 16 percent from two years ago. But even at those levels, only roughly 20 percent of the families eligible for assistance are receiving LIHEAP aid. Reducing funding for LIHEAP to under $2.6 billion would mean that more than 3.1 million families nationwide would no longer be able to receive help from this vital program.

In addition, energy prices have increased substantially in recent years and are projected to remain high. According to the Energy Information Administration (EIA), over the last 5 years, the average cost of heating with heating oil has jumped from $1,337 to $2,124 this winter. The average cost of heating with propane has risen from $1,275 to $1,966 and the average cost of heating with electricity has increased from $723 to $941. Furthermore, according to the EIA, prices for all heating fuels will increase for consumers next winter.
